The blue filter removed arsenic from the river water during the controlled trial. The treatment reduced contamination below the laboratory reporting limit. Investigators recommended deploying the filter in every village before the rainy season.