Northbridge Public Library asks the university review panel to compare proposals for improving access across three neighbourhood branches. Each candidate should submit an independent recommendation grounded in the fictional facts here. The annual budget is fixed, the buildings remain publicly owned, and the council must publish its reasoning before the next funding meeting. Discuss the proposal assigned to you, identify who benefits, describe an implementation obstacle, and name an observation that could change your decision. Do not invent survey findings or treat an illustrative calculation as measured evidence. Keep any quotations separate from your own analysis and explain uncertainty in language. The panel welcomes disagreement when the argument follows from stated assumptions. Your response should be understandable to residents without specialist training. Include a practical first step, a responsible team, and a review date. This shared institutional prompt is provided for context and should not be assessed as original analysis.

A mobile return service would help residents who already borrow books but cannot carry them back. Use the existing council van on its quiet route day and let carers reserve a collection by telephone. Staff must separate returned volumes from parcels carrying food. The transport supervisor can log missed pickups and journey distance for six weeks. Low demand would justify replacing the route with collection lockers at the clinic. This proposal addresses the burden of returning heavy books rather than buying more copies.
