Northbridge Public Library asks the university review panel to compare proposals for improving access across three neighbourhood branches. Each candidate should submit an independent recommendation grounded in the fictional facts here. The annual budget is fixed, the buildings remain publicly owned, and the council must publish its reasoning before the next funding meeting. Discuss the proposal assigned to you, identify who benefits, describe an implementation obstacle, and name an observation that could change your decision. Do not invent survey findings or treat an illustrative calculation as measured evidence. Keep any quotations separate from your own analysis and explain uncertainty in language. The panel welcomes disagreement when the argument follows from stated assumptions. Your response should be understandable to residents without specialist training. Include a practical first step, a responsible team, and a review date. This shared institutional prompt is provided for context and should not be assessed as original analysis.

Borrower privacy deserves attention before a new recommendation screen is purchased. The catalogue should retain the active loan record and erase a completed transaction when its administrative purpose ends. A resident ought to search for sensitive health information without building a permanent profile at the council. Ask the information officer to document deletion behaviour using a test account. If a statutory retention obligation applies, publish its scope before changing the software. Aggregate circulation totals can support planning without exposing a person's reading history.
